List Poetry-
contains a list, often the title will say what it is about.

What Does My Pocket Dictionary Look Like?
tape, a white label, creases, and lamination cover the outside worn pages, ink and glue lie within words from every letter, and every letter are found pencil and pen marks are written inside nouns, verbs, adverbs, and adjectives line the pages it reminds me of the sentimental value, the knowledge gained, and the support it gave

You try some now-

____________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________